Volunteers Bring Enthusiasm and Joy to State Office

The Kansas Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) State Office has received assistance from Earth Team Volunteers including creating materials for employee training, addressing envelopes to all field and area offices, creating databases, photocopying, and picking up recycling.

Jan Klaus is the Earth Team volunteer coordinator in Kansas. Klaus says her volunteers not only assist with daily duties, but also bring enthusiasm and joy to the office.

The office staff recently hosted an appreciation luncheon and celebrated the hard work of its volunteers. "Our volunteers are willing to work at a moment's notice and they help ensure we are meeting our deadlines. We truly appreciate our volunteers." said Klaus.

Above: Afternoon snacks and tea were provided to Kansas state office volunteers--thanking them for all their hard work.

The Earth Team is the volunteer component of the Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS), a USDA agency. For more about NRCS and the Earth Team, visit www.usda.nrcs.gov.
